

OFM Youth Day competition frees someone's future

Issued by OFMRadio 25 Jun 2020

OFM, inspiring listeners to live the real good life in central South Africa, has helped one young person to move forward with their future goals and aspirations thanks to the #FreeYourFuture competition. The initiative was part of the station's Youth Day celebrations on 16 June.

Ayanda Makehma, a 22-year-old public management and governance student at the Central University of Technology, was the lucky recipient of financial assistance to help clear student debt that was stopping her from receiving her qualification.

Prior to studying public management and governance, Ayanda did a community development work (CDW) course, which also involved work integrated learning at a local hospice. Thanks to the #FreeYourFuture competition, Makehma will now receive her CDW certificate, which will open many doors for her.

According to Lindiwe Mtwentula, OFM marketing manager, student debt is a huge obstacle preventing many students from moving forward in life.

"A student cannot graduate until all outstanding accounts at the higher education institution have been settled. As a result, many students cannot graduate despite passing all their subjects and qualifying for the degree, because of crippling student debt. This is why we created the #FreeYourFuture competition – to help one person to finally graduate and embark on their career path."

This is the second year that the #FreeYourFuture competition took place. To be considered for financial assistance, persons between the ages of 18 and 35 had to email their contact details, motivation, account, proof of enrolment and a copy of their IDs to the station.
