

Finding reliable employment

When you find yourself unemployed, how do you get back in quickly?

Earlier this year I was rendered unemployed. The company I was working for at the time ran onto some financial trouble, and me, as a result, got retrenched.

I am a video editor with experience spanning 5 years, and a variety of different productions undertaken, ranging from mainstream television (long and short form), music videos, as well as corporate productions for major local and international clients.

I am a skilled editor, with a vast understanding and working knowledge of both pre- and post production of both audio and video, and its' related processes, be it scripting, audio mixing, camerawork, or basically any area of production.

None the less, finding new work has proven to be an uphill battle. Where can I find a proper listing of available positions?

I know this site offers some positions at times, but these are few and far-inbetween.

Any pointers?
