

PRC recognises the women leading South African publishing

The Publishing Research Council (PRC) recognises the women leading the South African publishing sector - print and online - to mark Women's Month.

Overabundance has made
information cheap,
but publishing
brands that have built up a reputation of truth telling remain an antidote
to misinformation.

Denise Evans

Editor, Current Affairs
Winner of the inaugural International Award for Leadership in Agricultural Journalism

Treat everything
you read online
as fake news until proven otherwise.
The fact that an article has been shared a thousand times does not mean
it is true.

Thandeka Khumalo

Executive Editor | Sowetan

If you can live your life without being someone else's audience, do it. Reading makes you think. Following makes you follow.

Sany Brakenhoff

Editor, Fokof

Print media faces many challenges and we have to protect our integrity. We cannot be found wanting, we have to tell like it is with well researched articles.

Mapane Malefane

Independent Journalist Former editor of editor - Southern Broadcasting Corporation (SABC)

There is nothing like the written word to connect people, share memories and broaden horizons. It shapes, influences, informs. Makes us citizens of the world.

Michelle van Breda

Editor SABC

As a magazine editor, I've witnessed the incredible power of authentic storytelling that is truly representative of the audience's experiences. I truly believe that as publishers we still have a fundamental role to play in educating and empowering women.

Mabeli Soga

Editor Times Live

Beyond our passion to tell stories, publishing is about waking up every day to expose injustices, and to shine a spotlight on inequalities that affect the most vulnerable.

Mapula Nkomo

Editor in Chief Daily Sun, Daily Sun Online, Sunday Sun

In the "post-truth" world, recognised publishing brands provide a haven of integrity and a credible beacon for decision-making, to readers overwhelmed by the social quagmire.

Lisa MacLeod

Head of Digital
The Guardian
UK since 2014

Being able to educate, inspire and inform through words is one of my greatest achievements.

Katsangula (Liba) Nondzaba
