

Transnet gives back this Mandela Day

Port employees of Transnet National Ports Authority (TNPA) has partaken in giving back this past Mandela Day by doing various activities at institutions across the country.

Cape Town Port Manager Mpumi Dweba (in red) with the leadership of the Douglas Murray Home Retreat and donations from port employees.

The Port of Durban team partnered with SAI Feeding Scheme to provide meals for close to 3,000 vulnerable people in and around Durban, including Wilson's Wharf and the Raffia Road and Welbedacht informal settlements in Chatsworth.

TNPA Chief Financial Officer Mohammed Abdool was among the organisation's executive committee members who helped out at the premises of the United Cerebral Palsy Association of South Africa.

TNPA's Port of Saldanha volunteers at Siyabonga Care Village.

The Port of Durban team partnered with SAI Feeding Scheme to provide meals for close to 3,000 vulnerable people in and around Durban, including Wilson's Wharf and the Raffia Road and Welbedacht informal settlements in Chatsworth.

The employees were able to choose which organisations they wished to support. The activities included providing meals, painting, cleaning, donating groceries and renovating.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>