

Pink intrigue at sunset

The sunset in Sandton was just a little pinker on the evening of 8 June 2006, where 1775 pink balloons - a tribute to the year that Veuve Clicquot introduced Champagne's first Rosé style bubbly - danced across the skies above the Michelangelo Towers in celebration of the launch of the Rosé non-vintage in South Africa. "We planned to make our guests feel on top of the world, and where better than in the most talked about penthouse in town?" comments Heidi Rosenthal Duminy, Veuve Clicquot brand manager South Africa.
