

Singita welcomes new GM of conservation

Singita has appointed Inge Kotze to be its general manager of conservation. Kotze replaces Neil Midlane, the former general manager of conservation projects, and Mark Witney, the former CEO of conservation.

She is responsible for the all-woman conservation team, which is responsible for Singita's biodiversity and sustainability initiatives, as well as its community partnership programmes.

Kotze's most recent role was that of senior manager of conservation integration for South Africa's World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF) environmental programmes.
