The Garden Route's George Airport was named Africa's Best Airport by Region (under two million passengers per year) and Durban's King Shaka International Airport came in third place in the Best Airport by Region (over two million passengers per year) category - after Morocco's Casablanca Airport (first place) and Mauritius Airport (second place).

Kenya's Nairobi Airport was named Most Improved Airport by Region.

The ACI awards programme is described as the world's premier passenger service benchmarking programme for airports where passengers rate airports according to their travelling experience.

Said Senzeni Ndebele, Acsa's corporate affairs senior manager for regional airports: "We are very pleased to have received yet another Airports Council International acknowledgement of George Airport's passenger service excellence, as voted for by the passengers that have arrived and departed from the airport."

George Airport, which welcomed over 663,331 passengers last year, not only plays a central role in the region's tourist economy, but is a national distribution hub for cargo such as flowers, fish, oysters, herbs, and ferns.
