South Africa and Africa's Top Employers 2022

24 Jan 2022

In 2022, the return to 'normal' has been more difficult than anticipated for many organisations. While many imagined that the challenges of the last few years would be left behind it was not the case. Across the globe companies needed to show their commitment to meeting the changing needs of their employees and the wider world around them.

David Plink, CEO of Top Employers Institute, observed: "The turbulence impacting the workforce over the last few years has led many organisations, including our own, to rethink the way that they approach the changing dynamics of work. Despite all this change certified Top Employers have continued to go above and beyond to maintain their excellent people practices in the workplace."

Top Employers Institute, like the previous year, took the opportunity to host their virtual Certification Celebration. Alongside the virtual event, there will be a series of in-person events taking place across the world.

Plink concluded, "We are proud to share this year's announcement and congratulate all Top Employers that have been certified at our third global virtual Certification Celebration. The in-person events, that come not long after the virtual event, will be an opportunity for Top Employers to connect and continue celebrating their certification. The virtual and in-person events are important for certified companies to celebrate their certification and their role in helping to shape a better world of work."
