Across multiple categories the National Business Awards has announced its first-round of finalists for the 16th annual National Business Awards. Omni HR Consulting has been announced as a finalist in the Education, Training and Skills Development category. The awards ceremony will take place at the Emperors Palace in Johannesburg on the 15th November.

“Without a doubt, the recognition of being announced as a finalist in the Education, Training and Skills Development category, is testament to the hard work and commitment from our entire team. We are humbled and proud to have been identified as a top performing company,” says Cassandra Julius, Marketing Executive at Omni HR Consulting.

The awards recognise companies with outstanding performance in areas including sustainability, customer focus, tech innovation and fast growth. With its rigorous research and criteria, the accolade is recognised as a benchmark for business excellence.

“Serving excellently and changing lives is what is done, without question or hesitation by our teams who are at the cold-face of our learners daily. The recognition and possible winning of the award will be an acknowledgment on a broader scale of our commitment to driving sustainable change and growth in the South African economy,” adds Julius.

“We are tremendously excited by the entries we received at the National Business Awards this year. For the first time we have added sector-specific categories, allowing us to celebrate the growth leaders across the South African economy. Helping us celebrate their successes on the night, VIP speakers Colin Coleman from Goldman Sachs, Bonang Mohale from Business Leadership South Africa and Asha Patel from Google SA will be in attendance. It really promises to be a stellar event,” says Van Fletcher, Director at Top Communications and Media.
