

Kudos to FCB for flying the SA flag abroad

 By Leigh Andrews 5 Jan 2015

FCB's often included in lists of top local agencies. Thanks to a report by CNN, one of its largest local initiatives now being noticed overseas...

This morning, one of the highlights of my Twitter stream was the following:

“ FCB's Giant Flag initiative named as one of 10 best innovations in 2014 by CNN: <http://t.co/bO2PZZ7MtG> #GiantFlag
FCB South Africa (@FCBsouthafrica) January 5, 2015 ”

It's big news when a local agency is mentioned on international sites without an advertising award show in sight at the time yes, I say 'sites' because FCB's #GiantFlag was also mentioned in AdWeek's Ad Freak section a few weeks ago.

That's because this isn't just any old initiative that's set up for a short time then dismantled, never to be heard of again - #GiantFlag is set to change the face of Camdeboo Municipality by actually creating jobs and leading to a true socio-economic shift. Even cooler? The resulting 66 hectare South African flag, made up of millions of plants and a solar field, v be visible from space.

If you missed the news at the time, don't fret as you can read more about the FCB #GiantFlag initiative here and watch the short clip below...
